

“As the water fills the empty spaces,
As it trickles gently like a stream,
As it warms in the heat of the midday sun,
And glistens with the light from those beams,
Take me to a place where there’s water
And wash me as clean as the whitest snow,
Take me as I am with my weaknesses
And help me be the person that will know
That You alone will fill those empty ditches
Where the land maybe a waste tip now
Where weeds may have grown instead of blossom
Take me and help me to know,
That You are in charge of the way Lord,
And as I follow , You clear the darkness away,
Take everything that is there in those ditches
That You don’t want me to have or to say,

Use the water for a deeper cleansing
Wash the deepest crevices of my heart,
And fill the ditches to overflowing
So that I can make a new start,
Allow the water to keep on running

Crystal clear and without any stone
Blocking its way on this journey
A journey that to You is known,

In each of us bring a new peace now,
Let each need be met as we receive
A fresh awakening of Your grace and love
Filling the ditches and helping us believe,
That You take the darkness, grief and pain
That You carry the sorrow, doubt and fear,
That Your love will fill those dried damaged places
And bring joy where there was emptiness or tears
So we can rejoice and know our Father
Is in control of all that we need for each day,
And all that You ask is for us to trust You
And we fall to our knees now and pray,
Lord fill the empty ditches
With a revival of water, as Your praises we sing,
Where the beauty will flow and everyone can know
Of the hope from the darkness that You alone can bring.
